Synopsis: Stagflation risks and rising interest rates, combined with geopolitical conflicts and tensions, are disrupting global economic outlook and financial markets. Meanwhile, with accommodative economic policies winding down, economic growth across the world decelerating and the impact of COVID lingering, businesses are rethinking how they operate, invest and manage risks.

The panellists will share their insights on how they and their stakeholders are adapting their strategies, operation and investment approaches to cope with the challenges and capture the opportunities amid the turbulence.

10:50-11:05am

Break

11:05-11:55am

Panel 2 – Sustainable Finance – from Paris to Sharm el-Sheikh and beyond

Panellists:

(in alphabetical order of surnames)

- Joseph Bae, Co-Chief Executive Officer of KKR
- JIN Liqun, President and Chair of the Board of Directors of Asian Infrastructure Investment Bank
- Anand Selvakesari, Chief Executive Officer of Personal Banking & Wealth Management of Citigroup
- Hanneke Smits, Chief Executive Officer of BNY Mellon Investment Management

Moderator:

Nicolas Aguzin, Chief Executive Officer of HKEX

Synopsis:

Sustainability promises to bring purpose to finance. In turn, the financial industry promises to bring capital to sustainability. Seven years after Paris and ahead of another Conference of the Parties at Sharm el-Sheikh, a litany of financial jargons – risk management and disclosure, carbon trading, taxonomy, green-washing, ESG data, and talent and capacity building – have entered the common parlance of environmental policymakers and activists. What exactly has been achieved and what more – or less – needs to be done?

The panellists will share their insights on the current state of the sustainable finance industry, how their institutions are approaching the issues, and how the industry will evolve.

11:55am-12:45pm

Panel 3 – Technology, Innovation and the Future of Finance

Panellists:

(in alphabetical order of surnames)

- Rob Kapito, President of BlackRock
- Daniel Pinto, President and Chief Operating Officer of JPMorgan Chase
- Noel Quinn, Group Chief Executive of HSBC
- Bill Winters, Group Chief Executive of Standard Chartered

Moderator:

Neil Shen, Founding & Managing Partner of Sequoia China

Synopsis:

Technology is reshaping the future of finance. Innovations in artificial intelligence, big data, distributed ledger, cryptoassets and DeFi all have the potential to upend the status quo and redefine the financial market landscape, value propositions, business processes, and risk management.

The panellists will share their insights on the developments they think will bring the greatest challenges and opportunities for the financial industry, and how their institutions are responding to and shaping such developments.
